1. A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114.

Applicant's submission filed on July 6, 2010 has been entered.

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

4. This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

5. Claims 1, 6, 11-14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Sunderberg (6090251).

Sunderberg teaches a microfluidic channel 34 with intermediate side channels (Figures 3-4). The top half of the channel is shown as tapering outward at the surface, e.g., tapering inward in the direction of flow. Either the top or bottom half of the channel may be structured to taper inward toward the surface (col. 7, lines 39-41).

It would have been obvious to make the bottom half of the channel taper toward the bottom surface, resulting in a tapered channel of decreasing dimension in the direction of flow in order to make a device as envisioned and suggested by Sunderberg. It is the examiner's position that passage through a tapered microfluidic passage would inherently elongate a polymer such as DNA, which is not positively recited as being present in the device. Flow from the side channels joins flow in the tapered channel to flow in the flow direction of the tapered channel. With respect to claims 12-13, side channel size is a result-effective variable and it would have been obvious to size the side channels so as to provide desired flow volumes into the tapered channel. The pattern of the channels is repeated symmetrically across the tapered channel and on the substrate.

6. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims above have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
